

VAC105	CITIES FOR PEOPLE
Contact Hours	30 Hours
Prerequisite	Nil

Course Description

The course intends to develop a conceptual understanding of cities, sustainable use of public space, making people visible in the urban context, walkability, public participation process, and people first- changing the planning model. In economic terms, the result has been a reversal of the long downward trend in Central Business District commercial activity. This has been supported by the rediscovery of the city as a center of culture and entertainment, a haven for small creative businesses, and a great place to live and learn. The course also gives an insight of cities with function and infrastructure enough to make their citizens happy.

Course Objectives

This course is designed to know about the city, its functions, composition and uses. Telling the students about how different cities are different due to various factors. The course also deals with how Indian cities are different from foreign cities. What are the different kinds of cities? What are the drivers of a cities culture and development?

The course also involves a literature study: Presentation on a city of your choice highlighting the salient features of the cities and how it developed over time. The things that make it different from other cities and civilizations.

Answers to basic questions like what is a city limit? What is an Urban Sprawl? What is a compact city? What is sustainability? What is the relationship between a compact city and sustainability- is it negative or positive in anyway? What is live-ability? How do cities become liveable? What makes our city safe? What are the citizens right from the city and also his/her duties towards the city? What is the right to city? Should walkability in a city increase?

Course Outcomes

The subject objective is to introduce the students to the discipline of urban planning and the role of citizens in a city and about being a better human being who can uplift the society.

Upon successful completion of this course, students will be able to:

1. Engage in imaginative inquiry to explore concepts and perspectives in order to develop city designs and functions according to the site.
2. Locate, acquire, evaluate, and apply information in order to prepare city base maps and plans.
3. Have knowledge of all central and state government schemes that have been proposed.
4. Prepare base maps from available material and information gathering.
