

VAC109	UNDERSTANDING ADOLESCENT BEHAVIOUR
Contact Hours	30 Hours
Prerequisite	Nil

Course Description

This course will serve as an introduction to psychological development during adolescence. We will focus on the timeline and process of physical, social, emotional, and cognitive development during the adolescent years. Research methods and research findings, the leading theories and explanations of adolescent development, and the contexts in which development occurs will be discussed. In addition, we will learn about how the environmental context (including culture, school, and media) can influence adolescents. Although the course focuses primarily on “normal” development, we will also study some of the psychosocial problems common during adolescence. By the end of this course, students shall have an understanding of how adolescents develop, including normative variations in development. Students should also be able to describe key domains of development (e.g., cognitive, social, biological) and factors that affect various aspects of adolescent development.

Course Objectives

Students will be able to:

- To identify biological, cognitive and social transitions that occurs during adolescence.
- To describe the role of key ecosystems including family, peers, schools, media and employment on adolescent development.
- To define intra-individual and interpersonal changes that occur during adolescence
- Identify key theories, concepts, and applications of the psychological study of adolescence.
- To explain the nature and implications of psychosocial problems during adolescence.

Course Outcomes

CO 1: acquire a comprehensive understanding of the physical, cognitive, emotional, and social development that occurs during adolescence.

CO 2: gain insights into the psychological processes and challenges that adolescents often face, including identity formation, self-esteem, peer pressure, and decision-making.

CO 3: identify and analyse common behavioural patterns and tendencies exhibited by adolescents, including risk-taking behaviours, mood swings, and communication styles.

CO 4: develop cultural sensitivity and awareness, enabling them to work with diverse groups of adolescents and address issues related to cultural differences.
